Key milestone completed on the Chimes Tower

The Catalina Chimes Tower Foundation plans to repair the Chimes Tower and the chimes within it. The Chimes Tower was commissioned by William Wrigley Jr. in 1925.

The Catalina Chimes Tower Foundation is one step closer to restoring the beloved landmark perched on the hill above Avalon Bay, ensuring that the Chimes Tower's tolling and music will continue to resonate through town for the community and future generations to enjoy.

The Board of the Foundation recently announced that it has hired Dave Thompson Construction as project manager of the restoration program.

Thompson will work closely with the Facilities Committee of the Board, overseeing the project. "I am thrilled to be a part of this," said Thompson.

"Boulder Construction recently poured concrete for the flagstone entry and repaired the steps that lead to the mechanical room. Definitely a highlight and key milestone launching the restoration," he said.

With a fundraising goal of $1 million, plans include a high quality, long term repair of the existing structure, buttresses and exterior walls that gives them a fresh clean look; full repair of chimes and mechanism; preservation and re-use of existing Catalina tile; hand forged iron work—including a newly designed front door for increased visibility, chimes arched grills and decorative fencing intended to allow close viewing access; native landscape design by Deborah Richie-Bray; and tower lighting.

"We couldn't be more excited with this groundbreaking news," said Alison Wrigley Rusack, great granddaughter of Ada and William Wrigley Jr., who commissioned the Chimes Tower in 1925," Thompson said.

"We are especially delighted to be able to see the physical progress on our restoration efforts," Thompson said.

The Catalina Chimes Tower Foundation Board expressed its sincere appreciation to Geoff Rusack and Charlie Canby, of the Facilities Committee, for leading this project and to all of the local residents and business owners, as well as visitors, who have given generously toward the goal.
